This lesson on Caring for the Terminally Ill includes a complete training packet. Each in-service packet takes approximately one hour to complete and fully meets the Medicare in-service training requirements. As aides need training, you can make as many copies as you want - there s no restriction when used with aides assigned from your office location. Remember that Home Health Aides must have 12 hours of in-service training every year. LESSON OBJECTIVES Upon completion of this program, the home health aide will be able to: Define the end-of-life process Describe three end-of-life signs, and Explain how to keep a terminally ill patient comfortable OVERVIEW Caring for the dying patient and providing support for the family members is a special part of the home health aide s role. The biggest contribution an aide can provide lies in helping the patient live comfortably until death occurs. Sometimes this is called dying well. To help a patient die well, the home health aide can provide physical, mental, and spiritual care. This in-service reviews the role of the home health aide when working with terminally ill patients. It lists the end-of-life signs and gives examples of how to keep patients comfortable during the end of life. It also talks about pain management for terminally ill patients.
