In 1876 the South Kensington Museum held a major international exhibition of scientific instruments and equipment, both historical and contemporary. Many of the items eventually formed the basis of collections now held at London's Science Museum. In May 1876, organisers arranged a series of conferences at which leading British and European scientists explained and demonstrated some of the items on display. The purpose was to emphasise the exhibition's goal not merely to preserve archaic treasures (such as Galileo's telescopes or Janssen's microscope) but to juxtapose them with current technology and so inspire future scientific developments. Volume 1 of the proceedings is devoted to physics and mechanics. The contributors include William Thomson (Baron Kelvin), John Tyndall, Francis Galton, James Clerk Maxwell, J. A. Froude and Thomas Stevenson, all of whom have other works reissued in the Cambridge Library Collection, which also includes the full catalogue of the exhibition itself.

Often the Conferences Held in Connection with the Special Loan Collection of Scientific Apparatus, 1876: Physics and Mechanics (Cambridge Library Collection - Physical Sciences) (Volume 1) is kind of book which is giving the reader unforeseen experience.

Juanita Cooke:

Reading can called thoughts hangout, why? Because if you are reading a book mainly book entitled Conferences Held in Connection with the Special Loan Collection of Scientific Apparatus, 1876: Physics and Mechanics (Cambridge Library Collection - Physical Sciences) (Volume 1) your mind will drift away trough every dimension, wandering in each aspect that maybe mysterious for but surely will become your mind friends. Imaging each and every word written in a publication then become one form conclusion and explanation that will maybe you never get prior to. The Conferences Held in Connection with the Special Loan Collection of Scientific Apparatus, 1876: Physics and Mechanics (Cambridge Library Collection - Physical Sciences) (Volume 1) giving you another experience more than blown away the mind but also giving you useful information for your better life with this era. So now let us explain to you the relaxing pattern at this point is your body and mind will likely be pleased when you are finished examining it, like winning a game.
