Some Thanksgivings are meant to last a lifetime. It's Thanksgiving 1905 and Margie Thornton is deserted for the holiday by her uncle's family. She expects to be alone for Thanksgiving, but God has other plans. As the snow clouds roll in, so does an amazing set of events that will forever change the hearts and lives of those the storm affected. Margie must now fight her uncle's insistence to marry her off. Can she stave him off, hoping for the promise of a man she barely knows but to whom no man compares? Will she have the faith to wait for the promise she holds in her heart and pray for the trials of those she has come to love? She fights the imminent but longs for the impossible.
