A timely and original video packed with insights that will enhance the work of a broad range of educators and mental health professionals, this resource is one that anyone who works with teenagers won't want to miss. It provides an engrossing account of the coming out process of gay and lesbian youth and the special difficulties these teens face at home and at school. Interviews with adolescents and their parents are interwoven with professional commentary and dramatic vignettes performed by a theater group of gay and lesbian teens.

Topics include:

- * The process of coming to terms with a homosexual identity
- * The need for gay and lesbian role models and support groups
- * Coming out to close friends and family
- * The road to understanding and acceptance for parents
- * and more.

Who Should Use this Video

A valuable professional training tool and a much-needed component of health education and human sexuality courses for teenagers, this unique video is ideal for teachers and school administrators. It is invaluable as well for family therapists, child psychologists, and social workers, and of course, teenagers and parents.

The Companion Leader's Guide

A concise leader's guide contains guidelines for effective use of the video, discussion questions for group leaders, an annotated bibliography, and a list of organizations providing information and support.
