Margaritas and Redfish Ken Hada

In this engaging and accessible book of poems, Ken Hada offers readers an increasingly rare vision: the portrait of a man connected to the natural world, telling a life of loons, herons, candles, and campfires, rocks, stars, thunder, and the moon. These poems are clear companions in a world too often confused by concrete and steel, information overload and nature deficit-disorders. Read them slowly, one a day, or the book all at once through. You will find here respect, generosity, and gratitude. You will be glad you came.
