This historic book may have numerous typos and missing text. Purchasers can usually download a free scanned copy of the original book (without typos) from the publisher. Not indexed. Not illustrated. 1879 edition. Excerpt: ...in the bleeding part. 3. To contract the vessels in the bleeding part. 4. To stay the rush of blood to the bleeding part. 5. To maintain the above conditions for a sufficient length of time to prevent a recurrence of the bleeding. 6. To remove or avoid the causes which excited the haemorrhage. 7. To remove or avoid the causes which predispose to the haemorrhage. 8. To prevent inflammation and disorganisation of the parts implicated in the bleeding. I have referred to my prescription published in 1868, as a generally useful form in which to administer many of the most potent of the remedies enumerated for the attainment of the above ends. But it must not for a moment be supposed that I advocate an ad captandum treatment of all cases of haemoptysis, either by this or by any other medicine or combination of medicines. Those who have read the foregoing pages will have found abundant evidence of this; and now I wish to emphasise it, by pointing out in a few words the SPECIAL ADAPTABILITY of our SEVERAL REMEDIES TO SPECIAL FORMS of Hemoptysis. Casting aside, for the moment, the elaborate and minute questions of diagnosis and pathology, which have already been fully discussed, the special forms of haemoptysis and the remedies most suited to each may be clinically arranged under the following heads:--1. Profuse and dangerous cavernous haemoptysis, from rupture of aneurisms formed on branches of the pulmonary artery, in the walls of cavities, and from ulcerative erosion of large vessels traversing cavities. (See pp. 80--83.) Our first and main object here should be, to block up the cavity with clotted blood; our chances of saving life in the first emergency turn upon our succeeding in this. Rest and Posture are our first remedies. We must take...
