On a fateful spring day of 1839, at the western edge of civilized America, a gang of outlaws attempts to remove a Native American who dares to sit in a white man's saloon. Town folks become embroiled, bullets fly and men fall. Forced from the saloon under the threat of further bullet trading, the outlaws then gallop out of town, but don't cotton to their treatment. Unaware that fate lurks, three sisters step into the blood spreading across the saloon floor. Fate and the outlaws plan further trouble.
